

Take the guesswork out of diagnosing your soil's nutrient requirements.

Because each field has its own, unique characteristics, soil testing is the first, critical component of all successful nutrient management programs. Without knowing the amount of nutrients present in the soil, you risk wasting money on unnecessary inputs and not reaching your yield goal.

The most complete, Web-based, interactive system on the market.

Unlike many other soil tests which offer just the basics, Conklin's partnership with Midwest Laboratories provides Web-based, interactive soil and/or plant tissue analysis with professional, easy-to-understand results. Not only will you receive a real-time, personalized diagnosis of your field's nutrient status, you'll get crop-specific AgroVantage nutrient recommendations for your upcoming planting season.

■ AgroVantage Soil Testing

Soil testing improves your return on investment (ROI) Soil testing is essential to maximize the effectiveness of your farming operation. The AgroVantage system provides one of the most technologically advanced soil analysis systems available. Results include nutrient recommendations and application rates for nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium and secondary and micronutrients.

“Conklin backs up their great AgroVantage products with sound information technologies. This includes their widely acclaimed soil testing program. With today’s rising fertilizer prices, we’ve recently seen thousands of examples where this soil analysis system has made recommendations that saved growers $20 - $80 per acre in fertilizer inputs without sacrificing yield.”

– Dennis Dammen, Minnesota, CropMaxx™ Crop Consulting

“After 15 years of field research following the recommendations of the AgroVantage soil-testing system, our average yield shows a 22.6-BPA increase with the AgroVantage system over the check. Side-by-side, long-term testing proves to me that Conklin’s AgroVantage system works year after year.”
